S. DI GIULIO, LONG RESIDENT IN WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP, SUMMONED LAST THURSDAY

Long Illness Ends in Death for Native Of Italy

Years of illness ended for Salvatore Di Giulio, long a resident of Niles, when he was summoned by death at 8:30 o'clock last Thursday evening. He had been confined to his bed for many months. He was fifty-one years of age.

Di Giulio was born in Porcari, Italy in 1882. H came to California in 1906, landing in San Francisco, where he remained for only a few days before coming to Niles. While in San Francisco, he married Egizia Dal Poggetto, who survives him.

Di Giulio took an active interest in the building of Washington township. He was employed on the construction of the Western Pacific railroad tunnel in Niles canyon, and when that was completed began work for the old canyon brick works. He later became one of the original crew at the Ford-Plummer gravel plant at Niles, and had remained in the employ of the plant through changes of ownership up to the time his illness forced him to retire from active life two years ago. Di Giulio had been in failing health for more than four years.

In addition to his widow, Mrs. Di Giulio, he is survived by two sons, Louis and Ceasar Di Giulio, and by a daughter, Mrs. Theresa Leal, who also live here.

Funeral services were held from the Pratt Mortuary at Hayward at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning. A high mass was said at the Niles Corpus Christi church at 10:00 o'clock, with the Rev. Father Emmet O'Connor officiating. Entombment followed at the Holy Sepulchre mausoleum at Hayward.

DEFENDANTS APPEAL 'RADICAL' CASE FRIDAY

Found guilty of disturbing the peace by a jury of local people, Faustina Ortiz and Frank James, said to be "Communists," were sentenced ten and twenty days in the county jail by Judge Allen G. Norris, Friday. The two were given the alternative of paying fines amounting to $80.

Represented by George R. Anderson, of San Francisco, the accused men pleaded not guilty of charges brought by Rufino Capas, Decoto rancher, who asserted that the defendants had incited fruit workers to strike early in July.

Both James and Ortiz filed notice of appeal after sentence had been pronounced, and will appear later before the superior court.

In view of the fact that he had been held in jail for three weeks pending trial, Ortiz's sentence was lighter than James' who had been held only ten days.

FAMILY FRANTIC AS FALSE RUMOR BRINGS NEWS OF ACCIDENT

Mr. and Mrs. M. N. Crane Not Involved in Auto Crash

Rumors that Mr. and Mrs. M. N. Crane had been killed in an automobile crash early yesterday were dispelled after a frenzied effort by members of the family here, when they got in touch with Mrs. Crane at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Wood, near Nevada City, where the couple had been vacationing. Mrs. Crane stated that they were both quite all right.

The rumor was the outcome of a coincidence of name and appearance of the Cranes here and another couple. The latter, who were killed in the crash, had a son working at the Campbell cannery where George, Raymond and Leland Crane are employed. Word was sent to the cannery of the tragedy, and the Niles boys immediately came to Niles, where they spent several hours fruitlessly trying to verify the message. George Crane finally got in touch with his mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Crane returned home yesterday evening.

NILES DOWNS SAN LEANDRO IN FIRST CHAMPIONSHIP TILT

Wild Hitting Orgy Ends With Score of 17 To 13 Sunday

High, wide and handsome is the apt description of the first game of the championship series. played at Niles Sunday, when the Niles hitters went berserk in the fourth inning and drove in ten runs to sieze an early lead that San Leandro almost capsized in the last three frames with an 11-run spree. The final score was 17 to 13 in favor of Niles.

The Niles crew batted clear around in the fourth to drive two opposing pitchers out of the box. The score hung at 15 to 3 until the seventh inning, when Bert Watson, star Niles hurler, began to weaken. With a lax infield, Watson suddenly awoke to find the tally at 15 to 13 and Niles in a fair way to lose the contest. Two more runs in the final innings gave Niles the edge.

Clarence Pine, catcher and manager, led the Niles team in batting for the day with two doubles and a single in three trips to bat. Tony Duarte hit a home-run and three singles in five tries, and played a clean game in the outfield. George Mederios connected for a home-run and two singles. Pura got two timely hits. Wes Raso, diminutive shortstop pounded out a triple and two singles, and played well at his position.

Sunday the Niles aggregation will travel to San Leandro, where the second game of the series will be played at the state league park. A victory will bring the seasons' trophy to Niles.

Former Niles Man Dies Sunday At Hospital

Word was received in Niles this week of the death of Frank Pacheco, former Niles man, at the Fairmont hospital, in Oakland, where he had been ill for many months.

Pacheco, who lived here many years ago, was residing on Eighty-Fourth Avenue, Oakland. He is survived by his wife and two children. He was a member of the Canyon Tent No. 85 of the Maccabees. Funeral was yesterday from the family home in Oakland.

Truck Trailer Loses Two Tires In Freak Mishap

A freak mishap recently proved to be a costly one to Joe Oliver, who operates a fleet of trucks here. A large trailer, drawn by a truck driven by Manuel Oliver, in some way lost a double wheel fitted with two new tires and tubes. The trailer, traveling light, remained upright, and the loss of the wheels was unknown to the driver until he reached Oakland. The truck and trailer were all right when he left the Carquinez bridge.

Oliver, although he searched carefully along the route for the wheels, was unable to find them. Advertisements to date have brought no response.

FIVE APPOINTED TO CONFER WITH CANNERS ON TOMATO PRICE

Growers of Four Counties Seek Increase in Canning Price

Five representative tomato growers of Santa Clara, Alameda, San Benito and Contra Costa counties were named on a committee Tuesday night at San Jose to confer with representatives of the canners league in San Francisco some time next week to discuss a raise in the price of tomatoes from $11.25 a ton to $15 a ton.

The determination of growers to seek a better price is the outcome of a survey which shows the tomato crop to be considerably less than was estimated at first. The group represented by the committee represents eighty per cent of the acreage in the four counties, which are the heart of the California tomato growing industry. 20,000 acres are signed up in the organization.

The price raise, growers say, should be retroactive, inasmuch as many growers are already shipping to canneries at the old price. R. C. Kennedy is the representative from this county.

COUPLE HONORED ON 60TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

At one of the season's most important social affairs Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Thane, were honored at a beautiful garden reception on their sixtieth wedding anniversary. The elderly couple were married in San Francisco in 1874.

More than 100 guests called during the afternoon and congratulated the couple. In the receiving line with Mr. and Mrs. Thane were members of the Golden Wedding club; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Mosher, married 68 years, Mr. Mrs. A. A. Hatch, married 53 years, and Mrs. Robert Fisher. Guests attended the affair from all over the east bay. There were a number from San Francisco. Numerous telegrams arrived from distant points, and cables from Europe, bearing congratulatory messages.

Miss Dorothea Ormsby, of Centerville, sang several numbers. She and A. A. Hatch rendered a duet, accompanied at the piano by Miss Arwina Ormsby. Immediately following the musical numbers, Mrs. Thane read two verses, written in honor of the pearl anniversary. One was from the Country club, written by Mrs. George Coit. The other was from Mrs. J. C. Shinn.

The spacious house was beautifully decorated with flowers. Refreshments were served. The Misses Gallegos presided at the tea table. Mrs. A. L. Juhl took charge of the punch bowl, assisted by Mrs. Crozier.

Of interest to all who attended were the original sugar flowers of the Thane's wedding cake, kept in a surprising state of preservation for sixty years.

ROBBERY ATTEMPT SUSPECT IS HELD FOR HIGHER COURT

Figured In Holdup of Irvington Restaurant On July 12st

Waiving the usual time between appearances, Claus Bennettson, said to have been an accomplice in a recent attempted holdup, came up for arraignment and preliminary hearing on charges of attempted robbery before Judge J. A. Silva Friday afternoon.

The court found the evidence sufficient to hold Bennettson on $2000 bail and bind him over to the superior court.

Bennettson, who is said to have confessed to police, is an alleged accomplice in a robbery attempt at an Irvington cafe July 2. Peter Clum, with Bennettson, was shot and killed by William Belkey, cafe proprietor. Bennettson, who had fled the scene, was arrested several hours later at San Leandro.

NILES JUDGE FINDS MORELLA GUILTY OF BATTERY

Found guilty of battery when tried at the Niles justice court Friday afternoon, Joe Morella, of Niles, was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail by Judge J. A. Silva.

Morella was represented by Public Defender Raymond Ferrera, who strove to prove that the defendant had acted in self defense when threatened by Frank Spicciani, proprietor of a local store. Spicciani filed a complain against Morella, after the later had snatched a club from him and beat him severely about the head in a fight at the merchants store ecently. The battle was the outcome of an argument over a tin of tobacco, for which Morella had refused to pay.

Previous to the trial, attempts had been made to prove Morella insane. He was adjudged sane, however, by county medical authorities.

Mrs. Eunice Gillis, and daughter, Patricia, of Phoenix, Arizona, arrived in Niles this week for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Norman H. Parks. Mrs. Gillis is Mrs. Parks' niece.

CRYING, "STOP, THIEF!"

Political candidates who haven't an original idea of their own, nor a mentality capable of grasping the economic strangulation that still holds the country in a deadly grip, are snarling at the radicals, and throwing the charge of Communist indiscriminatingly about the political landscape.

What is a Communist, anyway? The answer is simple enough, it seems to the writer, judging from the silly pronouncements of aspiring political candidates, who are either mentally dwarfs, or believe the voters to be. A Communist, then, is a man who differs politically from you.

Calling Sinclair a Communist is so ridiculous as to brand those making the charge devoid of honor or devoid of sense. Sinclair had been a Socialist for a long time before he became a Democrat. Over in Europe, Communists are killing Socialists and Socialists are retaliating by murdering Communists. There is no analogy between the two creeds.

But the charge of Communist is not being hurled alone at Sinclair, who, by the way, is quite capable of defending himself against a horde of politicians, who in comparison with him are intellectual gnats. The charge is being hurled, without sense of reason, against about any man or woman who does not believe that God intended rapacious greed to rule or ruin.

The movement has reached the point of civic and individual insanity—an hysteria in which a people can be lead by clever propagandists, but which lacking reason or rhyme, after a few weeks or a few months, falls as flat as a pancake.

With economic and governmental woes still harassing us, and unemployment a serious menace to the stability of our political institutions, it is a sad spectacle to see men running for state office with nothing to offer humanity but a bullet for an alleged radical or vilification for an intellectual with an idea not threadworn with time.

NEIGHBOR LEIDIG

Our neighbor, Hayward, is offering one of its favorite citizens for the consideration of the voters when they go to choose candidates for the state legislature. Don C. Leidig, mayor of that city, is the popular man put forward by our friendly neighbor. Now Leidig is a little different from some candidates. He does not believe that he can be a Republican, a Democrat, a Socialist rolled into one. In other words he takes his party affiliation with some seriousness. A man cannot serve two masters, nor two flags. Neither can a conscientious man pretend to be a good Democrat and a good Republican all in the same year.

Leidig is running on the Republican ticket, because he is a Republican. He is not reaching into the political hat, with his eyes blindfolded, hoping that he may draw out a Commonwealth nomination, should he fail to win a place on the Republican ticket.

We like his political honesty. He is a neighbor, a resident of south Alameda county, and we ask the people down here to give his many qualifications serious consideration.

IT WAS TO BE EXPECTED

Of all the asinine speeches delivered recently, what would be more natural than that Friend Richardson should be guilty of delivering it. The old man has reached his dotage.

Talking before a lot of old women, he spoke right loud and said that Young and Quinn should withdraw from the gubernatorial race in favor of his man, Merriam, who being elevated to the governor's chair by the death of Rolph, hastened to find a pleasant political berth for the perennial candidate for governor, none other than Friend Richardson himself.

That gave the people quite a laugh. While it was amusing, had it come from anyone else, it might have been considered immodest and in bad taste.

Young is not out of the race, nor is Quinn. The ex-governor is a good man, a capable man and a clean man. He ran the state economically and turned over to the squanderer, Rolph, a surplus of millions. He conducted the duties of his office with dignity and probity. The Republicans

Alfalfa Seeding Will Exceed 1933

By J. C. Hackleman, Crops Extension Specialist, University of Illinois. WNU Service.

A new all-time record for alfalfa growing is expected to be set in Illinois this year in spite of the fact that the 1933 crop of 337,000 acres was a record in itself. At least part of the 1,866,200 acres of Illinois land that will be retired from commercial grain production under the various adjustment programs will be utilized as an ideal place for starting an alfalfa meadow while at the same time obtaining some income from the land in the form of benefit rental payments.

Alfalfa may be seeded with or without a nurse crop.

Use of contracted land for alfalfa and other crops is explained in a circular, "How Use Contracted Acres," which the college has just issued for distribution to interested farmers.

Record plantings of alfalfa are only one indication of the extent to which Illinois farmers are carrying out the college's long-time teaching for the growing of more legumes on Illinois farms. This has been advocated for years not only as a means of adjusting production to demand but also of reducing production costs, of conserving land resources as a continuing source of wealth and of controlling insects and diseases.

As most of one growing season is needed to establish a good alfalfa field, there is no better place to start than on the contracted acres. However, alfalfa should be seeded only where the soil is known to be sweet enough to produce the crop and where soil tests indicate that there is sufficient available phosphorus to make production of the crop relatively safe.

If the alfalfa is to be seeded with a nurse crop, oats probably should be used since this crop is far less attractive to chinch bugs than is barley. Barley near a cornfield would be a worse hazard to the corn crop than would oats. Oats used as a nurse crop for alfalfa should be clipped before they head out. If the oats grow too fast, they probably should be clipped twice so that no large amount of material will be left on the young alfalfa at any one time and thus endanger the stand.

Alfalfa may also be seeded alone, after a thorough preparation of the seed bed, if weeds have been kept under control for several years on the land. Such seeding will likely require two or three clippings during the year.

No hay can be taken from alfalfa seeded on the contracted acres during 1934. The hay can, of course, be used in 1935 if the contracted acres have been released.

If summer seeding of alfalfa is preferred, the ground should have been plowed and prepared this spring. The seed bed should be worked at frequent intervals, thus insuring the killing of several crops of weeds. Seeding should be done in late July or early August so that the crop will be ready for use as hay in 1935. Any contracted wheat acreage so handled must be replaced by an equivalent contracted acreage in 1935.

Various Breeds of Sheep Differ in as Many Ways

A dozen different breeds of sheep are common, says the New York State College of Agriculture. These breeds differ in body form, weight, age at which they mature, type of fleeces, hardiness, and in other ways. A breed that is best suited to individual fancy, to the land, and to market demand can be easily selected.

After a suitable breed has been chosen, it is better to use this breed than to change from one to another every year or two. Also important in the breeding program are simple yet adequate records that aid farmers to cull their flocks intelligently and to select replacements of their own breeding.

Soil Erosion

The bureau of chemistry and soils says that nothing can be done immediately to bring back the top soil that has been lost. The process of formation of top soil is a long and complicated one of bringing up from the subsoil proper plant food, and a good fertile top soil requires as long as 400 years to be formed. For this reason and since the use of fertilizer on soil is not sufficient to create a good top soil immediately, soil erosion is very serious.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

For the last few years, adult Americans have been turning their attention more and more to pastimes that in the past belonged solely to children. So at the toy fair, which each spring makes the upper Thirties the toy capital of the country, there were playthings to keep grownups amused along with hundreds of others designed to make childhood hours happier and busier. In fact, in this mechanical age, this observer had difficulty in determining where one left off and the other began. For instance, there were electric trains with all kinds of accessories ranging from scales for weighing cars to automatic couplers. Curious as it may seem, the intricate trains were for the youngsters whose parents could afford to buy them, while for the parents there were far simpler trains. The essential difference, it seems, is that the toy trains for adults come in pairs so that there may be betting as to which can make the faster time.

• • •

Emphasis seems to have been placed on the gambling instinct as far as toys for adults are concerned. Racing trains had as companions parlor horse races, dog races, and even rabbit races. Then, too, there was the bird cage with dice instead of songsters, a device familiar to visitors of county fairs of the past —"the old army game." Parlor shooting matches may also be held, as complete galleries were exhibited, including those with sets of miniature soldiers which serve as moving targets. There were also pistols and guns, which shoot special copper-covered bullets, and they occasioned the statement that shooting ashes from cigarettes is now a popular pastime among debs of the Middle West. That statement is not given as fact since I have been unable to verify it.

• • •

Another thing that struck my eye was a riding horse. It wasn't the hobby horse of old days, but a thing on heavy springs. Those springs are pulled down and released when the rider gets aboard. Thus there is the effect of a bucking bronco without having to travel to a dude ranch.

• • •

The majority of exhibits at the toy fair this year, as usual, were of American manufacture though some foreign countries were represented. Among them was Russia. Most of the toys shown from there were peasant products. A number of foreigners attended the fair for the first time because anti-Nazi feeling caused a prejudice against German toys in some localities. Incidentally, the American toy business in the last 14 years has increased from $50,000,000 to $200,000,000 annually.

• • •

Just as an afterthought: Adults who buy toys for themselves or for kids this coming Christmas time will pay 20 to 40 per cent more than they did last year.

• • •

Too Poor to Propose

IF DORIS WHITE had not fallen into his arms, Bob Richards would never have given her another thought.

He was clumping up the last flight of dark, oilcloth covered stairs, when he heard a little gasp, and then something soft and yielding was flung head first into his arms. He caught her as easily as he had caught the ball when he was fielder, and having set her on her feet gently asked in his big voice with the trace of huskiness in it, "Hurt any?"

She breathed quickly, and answered, "I—I guess you saved my life!" There was just the suggestion of a laugh in that voice that went straight to Bob's heart.

"You see, I must have caught my toe in the oilcloth," she explained.

Bob thought she had the softest, sweetest voice he had heard for a long time.

"I think my dinner is forever lost!" Doris said sadly, stooping to feel about the stairs.

They found at last the head of lettuce, the two rolls still in their bag and the lemon that was to help make up the dinner. In the process they said several things to each other, altogether trite and yet somehow most illuminating.

So it was not strange that the second time Bob ran into the occupant of the hall bedroom he lifted his hat and stopped to talk.

The third time they met, Bob asked directly, "Would you take a walk with me this afternoon?"

The faintest tinge of color showed through Doris' white skin and she said—for it was Saturday—"I'd love to!"

They walked along Fifth avenue.

Doris' eyes were shining and she was actually prettier each time Bob Richards looked down at her.

The next Saturday it rained and Doris hesitated and then knocked at the door on the second floor that bore the card: "Robert Richards."

"I thought you might have tea with me, it's such a cold, dismal kind of afternoon," Doris offered.

At the answering gleam of pleasure in his eyes Doris hurried up the flight of stairs. She knew it would mean that she must lunch meagerly all the following week, but she bought crumpets—toasted them over her gas burner—and a tiny jar of marmalade.

At his loud rap she opened her door and smiled up at him.

Bob laid down a box of candy as he said, "I bought it for the party," and looked about him curiously.

For it was the oddest hall bedroom he had ever seen. He had imagined a room with a bureau and an iron bed, and enough room just to sit on the one chair. What he saw was a room with two windows and an alcove, a room that looked sunny in spite of the fact that it was raining, because the walls were yellow and charming sunny colored chintz hung at the windows and covered the cushions of the two brown tinted wicker chairs.

Gleaming brass candlesticks were on a table in the corner, a brilliant color print of blue mountain and an icy mountain brook hung over the gray-painted table. A couch under a tumble of cushions—and a black luster bowl held the frail narcissus in the window.

Doris sitting down at the table pouring tea into clear yellow cups, he suddenly saw as another girl. A girl removed from his own hard struggles by all the beauty of this charming room. Why, she must earn more in a week than he did to have a place like this!

For a month Doris scarcely saw the owner of the room on the second floor. When she did meet him by chance, he hurried past her with an abrupt "Good evening!"

But once when she climbed the two flights of stairs and saw that Bob's door was open and a strange girl was standing by the black marble mantelpiece, her heart seemed like a piece of lead. She could scarcely drag herself away.

"Oh, do you live on the floor above?" the strange girl asked eagerly. "I've seen your room and it is so pretty—"

Doris answered, wondering how she could go on talking when the bottom of her little world had dropped out.

"I bought the hangings on Sixth avenue at a sale, and the candlesticks in Allen street for $1.25; you can find some second-hand furniture and paint it yourself; oh, yes, I'll show you how." She smiled wistfully and went on up the stairs.

But the blood thrummed in her ears madly when she heard clumping steps behind her. Doris turned to see Bob Richards coming toward her with a bewildered, dawning happiness in his eyes.

"I heard what you said," he began, "I had to come back. I thought I'd go away and try to forget you—for I knew I couldn't ask a girl with all you had to marry a poor fellow like me. You mean it, Doris, you fixed up that room out of nothing?"

He caught her hands and looked down into her eyes.

"Don't you know I love you?"

"But—" she whispered.

"I was ashamed to ask a rich girl to marry me," he said as he took her in his arms.

Snow Preserves Berries

Much of the food supply of the bird inhabitants of the forest areas in the heart of the Ural mountains in northeastern Europe consists of berries of the previous season's crop. The snow comes so quickly after the berries have ripened in the short summer season that much of the fruit is covered with snow, either on the bushes or where it has fallen on the ground, before it can be harvested or has time to decay. The snow serves as a preservative and when it begins to melt away in the early spring the berries are just as fit for consumption by the birds as when they were first covered.

American Polo Ponies

American polo ponies are usually about 15 hands high and weigh in the neighborhood of 1,000 pounds. In this type of horse a short back and big barrel are encouraged, since these give wind and endurance for a horse which must carry weight at speed. Polo ponies usually have some thoroughbred blood. A good cross is three-fourths or seven-eighths thoroughbred with some other stockier breed.

Largest Rock Gardens

Cornell university at Ithaca, N. Y., has what are perhaps the largest rock gardens in the world. Two gorges, the one of Cascadilla creek and the other of Fall creek, each more than a mile long and with banks sometimes rising 250 feet from the water's edge, constitute these gardens. They are the two gorges which bound the university campus.

ICE PATROL GUARDS OCEAN SHIP LANES

Keeps Vessels Informed of Position of Bergs.

Washington.—The U. S. S. Mendota of the International Ice patrol reports 165 icebergs in the Atlantic ship lanes—the largest number since 1912 when one of the floating mountains of ice wrecked the Titanic, palatial British steamship.

"Icebergs have always been the dread of transatlantic navigators," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "They just drift here and there. They give no warning of their presence. They are propelled by ocean currents, winds, and waves. Fog is their constant companion.

"A vessel speeding through an area infested with moving ice, during the night or in fog, plays a game of chance. Even on a starlit night a berg cannot be seen beyond a half mile; but when the position of the ice is known to the navigator the danger is eliminated; he can alter his course to avoid the menace.

"The ice comes down every year, as it has for centuries, but now every berg that follows the eastern edge of the Grand Banks into the steamer lanes is kept under surveillance by the International Ice patrol. From this service navigators can learn the answer to the question which each asks: Where is the ice?

Born of Titanic Disaster.

"The founding of the ice patrol was a result of the sinking of the Titanic which collided with a berg on the night of April 14-15, 1912, with a loss of more than 1,500 lives. Following the disaster, a general demand arose for a patrol of the Atlantic ice area. Immediately the United States navy detailed two cruisers for guard duty until the last bergs disappeared from the steamer lanes in late June.

"During the fall of the same year the International Conference for the Safety of Life at Sea was convened at London, to organize the ice patrol on an international basis. Representatives of the principal maritime nations of the world signed the agreement on January 20, 1914, creating the international derelict destruction, ice observation, and ice patrol service.

"The United States was asked to undertake the management of this service. This country agreed to send two vessels which would patrol the danger area during the iceberg season. Each of the contracting parties consented to bear a share of the cost in proportion to its shipping tonnage.

"Not a single ship has been lost in the policed lanes through collision with an iceberg since the patrol was inaugurated.

"Greenland's 'icy mountains' are the source of most of the icebergs that come as far south as the steamer lanes, journeying about 1,800 miles before they become white 'specters' to shipping. With the exception of a small strip of coastal line, Greenland is completely covered with a vast ice cap estimated to be 5,000 feet in thickness. Always the ice mantle is moving down the slope of the land toward the sea, in great glaciers, pushing out through the valleys. As the ice reaches the sea it noses out into the water until buoyancy lifts it up, and then the front of the glacier breaks off at a weak spot.

A New Berg Is Born.

"There is a deafening roar and a thunderous crash as the glacial fragment plunges heavily into the sea, almost submerging. The water is churned into creamy waves as the new-born berg shakes off the sea, regains its equilibrium, and settles itself comfortably for a long journey southward. Only one-ninth of an iceberg may be seen above the surface of the sea. The bergs that menace Atlantic shipping come from the glaciers of west Greenland, floating southward in the cold Labrador current that keeps them intact. The east coast glaciers usually melt before they float so far south, for warmer water prevails on that side of the great Arctic island.

"The iceberg danger period is from March 1 to July 1. It is during that period that the cutters patrol the ice-endangered areas.

"The ice patrol cutter stands as traffic officer on this avenue of the sea. If the ice threatens a blockade, the cutter sets the stop sign and turns the traffic into a 'side road' detour to the south. Like a good traffic officer, the cutter on duty answers all queries about the condition of the road and will help a ship in trouble. On one day a cutter may hear from as many as 38 vessels.

"Thousands of Americans sail to Europe during the iceberg season. Few of them are aware, as they retire to their staterooms at night, of the precautions taken for their safety as message after message from the ice patrol comes into the radio rooms of their ships."

Warren Luck

By SIDNEY WINTHROP

©, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

IT WAS a cardinal article of faith up and down Duck river that things would happen to a Warren as sure as he was born. It had been so from the beginning—witness the voyage of Gilliard, the earliest comer across the mountains from Carolina. He had loaded a flatboat for New Orleans with the yield of his own fat, fresh land, sold out the second day after his journey ended for what seemed a fabulous price, then, going from the market, had met and fallen deep in love with Carlotta Woodruff—whom he married three days later.

When Gilliard died fifteen years later, leaving Carlotta five thousand rich acres, six sons and ready money in both pockets, she carried on just as if he were still there to comfort and counsel her.

To her grief she lived to see the name passing out—Warren daughters had far, far, outnumbered Warren sons in the third generation. But she died happy in the knowledge that the fourth Gilliard was the very moral and pattern of the first. His baby girl Carlotta received her last blessing.

Then one fine day in walked young Herbert Townsend, to say to her father and mother that he had married Carlotta at the county seat. His father, President Townsend of the Y. & C. railroad, had picked out a girl of quite another sort—not specially unattractive, but rich, and stupid beyond expression. Anyway, he had known the minute he met Carlotta that she was the only wife for him. No! He hadn't as yet a steady job, nor very much money—none, in fact, if the governor turned rusty.

So they went to live with Carlotta's family. Herbert found himself disowned save on the impossible conditions of forsaking his wife. Lacking a chance to use his mind, he did not blench before using his trained muscles. Going doggedly to work as a common miner, in a month he was promoted to gang foreman and better pay.

When at last they laid a son in his arms, his first tears fell. Carlotta, watching him, understood. He was vowing to make up to their son all his willfulness had cost.

She paid for it in utter desolation a year later, when lightning fired the house, killing her father instantly, stunning her mother, but leaving unscathed Carlotta, Herbert and their child. They got out safely, but when Herbert rushed back into the burning flames to save her mother, Carlotta followed him, until the baby's cries recalled her, severely burned. Herbert was staggering toward her, seared and blinded, but steadfast even to death. He had her mother in his arms.

A month later Carlotta, deeply scarred, a figure of woe, faced President Townsend. He said in a hard voice, his eyes greedily upon her son. "You stole my boy—now you will pay for it with your own. Give him up and he shall have all I meant for his father. You have an invalid mother to support—no strength to work, no beauty left to ensnare another husband, I will give you competence for life—and will give your son riches."

It was a frozen woman who laid her child in his arms, kissed it once, and moved away.

Years later—fifteen, to be exact—the Mountain house was interested and mystified in July at the coming of the Gray Lady. "Mrs. Florence Gray," her card read.

People waited to see whether she might be a friend of the Townsends. But when they came, a fortnight later, they seemed as strange to her as everybody else.

But the Townsends were in trouble. Townsend Williams, nephew of old Mr. Townsend, and co-heir with his grandson — seventeen-year-old Herbert, apple of his grandsire's eyes—was a bad egg. He hated Herbert and was always scheming to get him into scrapes. He knew his uncle's pride in blood and honor, and based his schemes upon it. Using an inborn knack with a pen, plus opportunities due to relationship, he had involved the family fortune so deep there was no turning back. A million dollars would be needed now to avert scandal.

Summoned imperatively to his uncle's presence, when old Mr. Townsend found out how things stood, the nephew found there his uncle's lawyer—and the Gray Lady.

"This scandal can be hushed—for a million dollars—if you are willing to beggar yourself," said the lawyer.

"I cannot do it," said Mr. Townsend. "Think of Herbert."

"I will give a million for him—twice over," said the Gray Lady.

Mr. Townsend stared. The lawyer explained. She could do it—she was the widow of Calvert Gray, the oil man, sole heir to his fortune. She had married him from pity when he seemed down and out. Gushers kept coming in, one after another—and she was left with a fortune.

"Quite the finest sort of romance," said the lawyer.

"With a happy ending for me," said the Gray Lady, once Carlotta Warren, "for with that million dollars, that clears the Townsend name, I buy back my beloved Herbert." And she rushed away to claim her ransomed son.

Havana Third Capital

Havana is the third city to serve as the capital of Cuba. Baracoa, on the northern coast of the island, near its easternmost tip, was the first capital, established by Diego de Valanquez in 1512. Two years later, Velasquez transferred the headquarters to Santiago, which remained the second capital until 1551. Meanwhile, the original Havana was founded in 1514, near the site of what is now known as the town of Batabano, on the south coast and about 50 miles from Havana. This infant city bore the lengthy title of "San Cristobal de la Habana."

ELECTRIC MOTOR AT ALVISO SCHOOL DISAPPEARS

Smashing the lock on the door of the pump house on the Alviso grammar school property one night last week, thieves unbolted a five horsepower electric motor from its bed and carted it away in an automobile.

Motor stealing, for a time a popular form of robbery in southern Alameda county, had dwindled during the last few months under the steady vigilance of police, and because of the efficiency with which the stolen devices were traced. The Alviso theft was the first in many weeks.

The motor was used at the school to operate the pumping plant.

COLLEGE FOUNDED BY ROSICRUCIANS AT SAN JOSE

Nearly eight hundred Amorc Rosicrucians from throughout the world gathered at their sixth annual convention in San Jose to witness the dedication of their science building founded on idealistic lines, relates Miss Phoebe Ormbsy, of Centerville, who has just returned from the Rosicrucian convention held in July, having represented the membership of this district.

Sir Francis Bacon, 1600 A. D., father of the present school of science, conceived in his novel, "The New Atlantis," a university whose object it would be to scientifically investigate the hypotheses and theories advanced by learned men, which because of their fantastic nature were considered "beyond the realm of religion or conventional science." The Rosicrucians, states Miss Ormsby, recognize Bacon as an early officer of their order. and thus their science building of ornate Egyptian design and housing chemistry, light, physics, radio and photographic laboratories will be devoted to original research into strange phenomena.

An important feature of the convention was the conferring on Dr. H. Spencer Lewis, imperator of the order, a cross of honor by the Washington representative of the American Flag Association for distinguished service rendered the association in its war on crime. Educational features consisted of philosophial addresses and addresses by Rosicrucian authorities on outstanding spheres of science. The delegates witnessed at the close of the convention a demonstration of the geometrical designs that sounds cause when translated into light, Miss Ormsby says.

Infantile Paralysis Epidemic on Wane In Alameda County

With not a single case of infantile paralysis having been reported in Pleasanton township nor anywhere in Alameda county south of Hayward, the epidemic in Alameda county seems to be on the wane according to a recent report of Dr. I. O. Church, county health officer.

Only 20 cases are in Alameda county at the present time, the health officer stated last week.

In the past week two new cases have been reported, one in Berkeley and one in Oakland. This is the lowest number of new cases since the epidemic began, Church said, and he feels that the epidemic is definitely on the wane. The total number of cases for Alameda county during the entire epidemic so far is 167.

In San Francisco, according to Dr. G. C. Geiger, public health director, only eleven cases are now in quarantine and a total of ninety-seven cases has been reported.

Both Church and Geiger state that they feel the worst of the epidemic is over. They ask that individual families use ordinary precautions to insure that the disease will not spring up again.

Agreement Reached Over Minimum Milk Price in East Bay

Although Pleasanton milk prices have been at nine cents per quart for nearly two weeks and only dropped to two quarts for fifteen cents for less than three days, a minimum price of nine cents was set in metropolitan east bay cities only this week following a protracted milk price war there.

The price was set under a milk licensing agreement which was to have gone into effect July 1, but which was held up because of strike conditions.

This was announced by Charles F. Kunkel, market administrator for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in the east bay.

This does not mean that the price must be nine cents per quart, but only that it must be not less than nine cents, he explained.

"The change in prices will be slight," he stated. "The retail price will be nine cents, and the wholesale price will be eight cents."

Milk prices have been ranging in the east bay from eight cents per quart, or fifteen cents for two quarts, in the chain stores, to eleven cents per quart for delivered milk.

FORMER POSTMASTER WILL BE HONORED AT DINNER TONIGHT

Mrs. Adeline Santos To Be Commended On Long Service

More than 100 guests are expected at the El Lido restaurant in Centerville tonight, when the Centerville Chamber of Commerce and the Lions Club will be joint hosts at a testimonial dinner in honor of Mrs. Adeline Santos, former postmaster, in recognition of her twenty years continuous service in the local postoffice.

The dinner followed a suggestion of F. T. Dusterberry, Chamber president, that something should be done to show the town's appreciation of Mrs. Santos' splendid record.

Mrs. Santos recently relinquished her post to M. W. Lewis, new appointee. Lewis, who took over control of the postoffice under the instruction of Mrs. Santos, stated that he owed the smooth transfer to her, and that he would henceforth strive to maintain the standard of service that she has maintained.

'JUSTIFIABLE,' SAYS JURY ON CLUM SHOOTING

Commending William Belkle for his deed, a coroner's jury passed a verdict of justifiable homicide on the shooting of Peter Clum. Inquest was held Friday at the office of Deputy Coroner F. F. Botelho, at Centerville.

Clum was shot to death by Belkle, when he attempted to hold-up the latter's restaurant at Irvington on the night of July 20.

Inquest on the death of Guy Lucas, of Niles, brought the verdict of suicide. Lucas shot himself in the head with a heavy calibre gun.

MEETING HOUR CHANGED

In order that there may be time for a short social following each gathering, the regular meetings of the Centerville council of the S. P. R. S. Depression Hits Santa Monica PELICANS

There's a story that comes out of Southern California. It's about the pelicans of Santa Monica Bay and these pelicans remind us of a lot of us human beings. The experience teaches us that more and better sales effort is required of every last one of us.

For years these pelicans had been fed by fishermen from their surplus catch, until they got the habit of eating without work.

This year high seas changing currents off Santa Monica cut down the catch, and fishermen no longer had any fish to spare. They noticed that the pelicans languished and grew thin and it dawned on them that they had forgotten how to fish for themselves. So they went down the coast and found some unpampered pelicans who had never been ruined by easy living and free fish. They turned them loose among the starving birds, who sat about on the beach and complained of hard times.

The way those imported pelicans went out after their own fish was an eye-opener. Pretty soon the hungry natives quit watching and tried it themselves. They discovered there are plenty of fish in the sea for the bird with energy and enterprise. And they've quit talking about the hard times."

Will Elks Enjoy Venison Dinner? It All Depends!

Alameda county Elks may enjoy a deer stew at their Alameda clubhouse on August 20. Then again, they may not. It all depends on Harry Rowell, of Dublin Canyon.

The venison feed is an annual event of the Elks club, with Rowell acting as the annual provider of the principal course. That is, he is supposed to be the annual provider. Last year he ran in three goats on the boys instead of deer. Some similar substitution is feared by many of the members this year.

Belief in his ability as a deer hunter, waxes and wanes and varies among the members. He has some loyal supporters who claim he will bring in the biggest buck in history this year. Then there are others who firmly believe his eye is failing.

According to Lee Wells, Pleasanton Elk, Rowell couldn't hit the side of Boomer hill at twenty yards. The confirmation or upsetting of Well's opinion will be found in the meat course on August 20.

Preparations for the event were launched at a committee meeting in Dublin Tuesday night. Wells was the only representative present from Pleasanton. Other committeemen present represented Livermore, San Leandro, Hayward, Washington township and Alameda.

Legion Entertains Commander County Council Wednesday

Meeting Wednesday night of last week the Pleasanton American Legion Post entertained the county council commander as the high light of the evening's business.

Preliminary plans for a preschool dance were laid. The dance, to be held either August 18 or 25, will be designed as the last good time for students and their friends before the fall term of school begins.

A committee was also appointed to represent the Legion at the general meeting Friday night in the city hall to consider ways and means of attracting an army air corps training school to Pleasanton. On the committee are Clay Elworthy, chairman, Earl Trimingham and Morris Elsnab.

Squadron caps arrived Wednesday night for the Sons of the Legion at their meeting. Thursday the Sons began a drive to sell tickets for the annual Legion frolic at an Alameda beach.

Tennis Gourts May Be Closed To General Use

In view of the near completion of the tennis courts at the Amador Valley high school, tennis players of Pleasanton are laying plans for the formation of a tennis club, while high school trustees threaten to disrupt their plans with the announcement that the general public may not be allowed to use the courts.

Trustees feel that the final decision as to whether or not the public will be allowed to use the courts rests largely with the citizens of Pleasanton. They feel that one or two trouble makers by thoughtless actions or by maliciously damaging the grounds or buildings may spoil it for the community as a whole. If they reach the conclusion that people using the courts can be trusted to conduct themselves with a due regard for public property, the courts will be thrown open to the public; otherwise they will not.

In the mean time tennis enthusiasts are going ahead with their plans. Rules for challenge matches and players' ratings are already being discussed. Ways and means of obtaining exhibition matches, to be open to the public without charge, are being considered. Many of Pleasanton's brightest tennis stars feel that if a club is formed Pleasanton will soon be placed prominently on the tennis map of the bay area by means of a few well-administered defeats to neighboring net club teams.

Erected at a cost of approximately $2,000, the high school courts are expected to be ready for use some time next week. The concrete is being swept clean of dirt put on while it was drying. Nets have been ordered and are expected to arrive within the next few days. Two doubles courts will be available when they are completed.

General Meeting Considers Proposed Army Air School

In order to co-ordinate plans for bringing the proposed United States Army Air Corps training school to Pleasanton a meeting of committees representing all of the town's civic and fraternal organization was called for 8 o'clock Friday evening in the Pleasanton city hall.

Committees from three organizations have already been appointed, while a fourth committee, whose members have not been announced, will attend it is definitely known.

Andrew M. Greve is chairman of the Junior Chamber of Commerce committee. Working with him are: Sam Glassey, Andy Jorgensen, Jim Trimingham, William F. Hall, J. J. Amaral, and Pete Christesen. The committee was named at an executive meeting of the chamber Tuesday evening.

The Pleasanton Lions were represented by a committee chairmanned by Thomas Orloff and including Jim Trimingham, John Amaral, Crawford Letham, Charles A. Gale and Charles Graham. The Lions committee was appointed at last week's meeting of the club and has already made a proliminary survey of possible sites for the school.

Legion members making up the committee to represent the Pleasanton Post and appointed at Wednesday evening's meeting of the organization are Clay Elworthy, chairman, Earl Trimingham and Morris Elsnab.

Mrs. Mary E. Stovall, president of the Pleasanton Women's Improvement Club, had promised to have a committee on hand to represent the women's organization. Committees from other town organization were also present Friday.

Developments to date in the work of securing the school for Pleasanton or vicinity include a letter from the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce to the Pleasanton Junior Chamber of Commerce asking if Pleasanton would be interested in securing the school; receipt of specifications for the site from Washington; two preliminary surveys of possible sites, one by members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and one by a Lions Club committee; and several meetings and discussions of the propositions by various Pleasanton organizations.

Members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce looked over several sits last Wednesday afternoon and reported the discovery of three excellent ones which fill specifications in every way. Two of these border the Hop Yard road while a third is on the main highway just a short distance northwest of Santa Rita.

Main points covered by the specifications sent out from Washington are given in condensed form below:

The site must be: 640 acres; square; not more than seven or eight miles from city; surrounded by a variety of terrain with open fields for emergency landings; free from obstacles to flight; away from the lee side of the city.

The climate must be: suitable for year round operation avoiding extremes, for prolonged periods, of fog and haze, rain or snow, temperature and humidity.

Utilities should be extended to the site without expense to the government. Water must be of good quality and not subject to restricted use; electricity must be available in large quantity and at the cheapest rate; and gas is desirable though not essential.

There must be rail transportation to the site and a paved road to the city.

Cost of living must be reasonable and no boosting of prices will be tolerated. Recreational facilities to supplement those at the school must be readily available and at reasonable cost.

County Officers Show Efficiency For Emergencies

Law enforcement agencies in Alameda county could be co-ordinated into a formidable statewide unit within a few hours in order to combat any mass uprising by communistic agitators or to cope with any other state emergency.

This, in effect, is the substance of a report to be made public in Sacramento tomorrow which discloses for the first time the manner in which peace officers in a score of California counties joined forces with state agencies to keep truck loads of food supplies and perishable farm products moving in the San Francisco strike zone.

Co-ordination of the law enforcement agencies in each county was directed by the county sheriff, in co-operation with the state highway patrol, under Governor Frank F. Merriam's order to prevent foodstuffs from being tied up, according to the report of Highway Patrol Chief E. Raymond Cato and Captain L. A. Eike of the Alameda county patrol squad.

Success of the program formulated by Governor Merriam and which, it was indicated could be placed into operation "upon very short notice," to combat any future disturbance, was attributed by Cato to the "splendid co-operation of the county sheriffs."

The report advises Governor Merriam that "evidence of communistic activity was found in each county in which the plan was placed into effect," and should "have considerable effect in forestalling future labor trouble in agricultural counties, if not prohibiting them entirely."

Results achieved through this emergency plan "prove that it would be difficult for red agitators to get a sufficient force together at any time to materially harm Califrnia industries, as the counties are now well organized and able to function in any crisis.

"Under this program, each county will be prepared to function independently or groups of neighboring counties will be able to join forces in combatting a common enemy," the Governor was informed in the report.

The program adopted in the strike crisis resulted in more than 1,500 highway patrolmen, sheriff's deputies, city police and special officers being assigned to convoy fleets of trucks loaded with food supplies and perishable farm products through picket lines and barricades, and in patroling highways at the peak of the emergency.

Meats, groceries and fresh fruits were delivered by caravan in virtually every instance where they were escorted by officers.

MISSING YOUTHS APPREHENDED BY SALINAS POLICE

Apprehended by Salinas police officers through teletype descriptions of the runaways, Allen Macy, fourteen, and Richard Stevenson, thirteen, both of Pleasanton, were returned to their parents last Saturday following their three-day disappearance.

Alarms were broadcast over the state last Wednesday evening when the two youths failed to return home for supper after being absent all day.

At first a mystery to their parents, the probable reason for their disappearance was disclosed by Ralph Garibaldi, local garage man when he learned of the youths' absence. They were caught by him Wednesday morning after hurling a stone through the windshield of a truck belonging to him. He released them when they promised to pay for the damage they had done. It is believed the two ran away rather than return home and report the incident to their parents.

The parents of the two were notified of the apprehension of the boys in Salinas last Saturday morning. They were held there at the juvenile court until their parents could motor south after them.

Macy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Macy, and Stevenson's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Stevenson.

DEERHUNTERS SWARM INTO RANGES AS SEASON OPENS

In spite of rumors that the antlered critters are scarce this year, Washington township deer hunters left the district in droves Tuesday night to be on the ranges at sunup yesterday.

Sport shops and hardware stores, where the necessary deer tags and licenses could be secured, did a brisk business last week, and are still furnishing belated nimrods with shells and credentials.

Hunters who have kept an eye on the migrations of the slender animals state this year that bucks are not too plentiful, either in the coast ranges or in the Sierras. In some regions a plethora of mountain lions have caused the deer to seek other stamping grounds.

Fred Rogers, game warden, who spends a great deal of time in the hills, is of the opinion that only the lucky ones will bag their deer early this eason. Rogers stated tha several local men have their deer "staked out," which means that the movements of a particular animal have been under survelience for some time, and its habits observed. Privileged hunters, with private ranges, will have no trouble, it is said.

Among the hunters who got their licenses in Niles up to Monday night were the following: Ward Crane, F. Martinelli, Earl Teeter, Norman Rose, Ed. Rose, R. Calhoun, A. L. Juhl, Ray Peterson, A. Brown, Dale Carruthers, J. Martin, F. Martin, Clarence Crane, Joe Pine, John Turner,

George Hellwig, E. Silveria, Bob Vieux, Ray Compton, Leon Vieux, Wally Ebright, Leon Solon, J. De Lago, J. Avilla, E. Frick, L. Calderia, W. J. Niles Boys Back From Trip To Eastern States

Marshall Green and Everett Mendenhall returned to Niles Friday after an extended motor trip across the United States. They left Niles on June 3, and drove to Washington, D. C. by way of Arizona, New Mexico and Texas. From Washington they went to New York and from there to Chicago, where they visited the World's Fair. They returned by way of Denver and Salt Lake.

In 8500 miles traveled, they reported no mechanical trouble and only a few flat tires. Both enjoyed the trip immensely.

Continuing their effort to clear away fire hazards within town, Niles firemen Friday burned off grass along the fence lines of the Belvoir hotel property. The task went without incident. Throughout the summer, firemen have been selecting grassy plots here, and cleaning them up, after owners of the property have removed grass from near buildings and fences.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

By NORMAN H. PARKS, Publisher Register

would do well to nominate him.

Quinn, while untried in a large responsible position, has a good record, and is by no means devoid of statescraft. He, too, might well make California a good governor.

Neither Young nor Quinn are apt to withdraw at the solicitation of the reactionary candidate's campaign manager, generally known in southern California as Harry Chandler's man Friday.
